

Nursing Home to Hospital Bi-directional Transfer

When implementing and modifying processes, workgroups should create a process map to make sure every step is considered in the exchange. A process map is a visual presentation displaying how to process a transaction and the important details. A good process map allows all stakeholders to understand the interaction of the work-flow and contains additional information about input and output variables. Below is an example of a process map for nursing facility to hospital exchanges.

*Medication Reconciliation occurs at this point